What I learned from my experience at the water park was that probably thousands and thousands of water is used for that place or maybe even more. I also learned that all those thousands and thousands of water is not wasted what I mean is that they don't dump that water out every day, they probably change the water once a year. The way they keep it clean is by using clorox to kill the germs and the bacteria in it.

What I learned about the ocean is that more than 100,000,000 of plastic bags float in it. The same with water bottles. This affects us because the fish might have the tendency to eat the ones that don't die of it, and the ones that live, they catch and eat it. It's bad because plastic has chemicals in it.

That's why we should not use plastic for the water bottle.
